Every physician matters, each patient counts.

The MMS delegation attends the American Medical Association (AMA) advocacy conference, hears congressional perspectives and policy updates

Leaders and representatives of the MMS participated in the AMA's National Advocacy Conference (NAC) held in Washington, DC. The MMS leaders engaged in conversations with our Congressional delegation to discuss current federal efforts to improve health care. The conference featured presentations from Seema Verma, Administrator for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, John King, CNN chief national correspondent, and many congressional representatives from across America.
